FROM THE VICE CHANCELLOR'S DESK

► Professor Dharmaraj Adat

Unity – a symbol of Kerala's resilience. After the southwest monsoon and the ensuing floods heaved the state into disarray, the focus is now on building Nava Kerala. The Sree Sankaracharya University of Sanskrit is also on its phase to overcome the decisive moment.

The flood taught us the lessons of unity – the ultimate survival competency. I hope our society will uphold this new found solidarity, unanimity and morale. The murky flood waters receded... academic sessions begun... the konch-chime of unity reflects the walls of the varsity. It is a long road ahead for Sree Sankaracharya University of Sanskrit to restore the flood-battered varsity to normalcy. The university, I say this with confidence, will use the setback for a paradigm shift in the approach to academic and infrastructural expansion.

The high-spiritedness in academics, developed during the post flood spell has given the university community the vitality for survival. The culture of academics and researches should be preserved at its glory for the new horizon. Liberating and disseminating the gathered knowledge is the ultimate mission of any higher education institution. Our message to the community will complete only if we retain Kerala's socio-cultural cosmos.

Quoting a stance from the Rigveda as an endnote to this message.

BLACK AUGUST

THE DELUGE THAT SHOOK SREE SANKARACHARYA UNIVERSITY OF SANSKRIT

Sree Sankaracharya University of Sanskrit is perhaps the lone higher education institution in the state to suffer massive losses in the deluge. The varsity, with its headquarters at Kalady is a research hub and has state-wide jurisdiction to conduct academic programmes with eight regional campuses spread across eight districts in Kerala.

The land here at the university headquarters' premises is unevenly filled, making some places relatively low-lying. On the 15th of August 2018 afternoon the water began to rise in the nearby paddy fields and correspondingly to the uneven areas of the campus. At the time, there were more than 500 students residing in the campus hostels. By nightfall, the water level upsurged alarmingly. As instructed by the university administration, the students were shifted thrice from one hostel to another before they reached the three storied Public Utility building which is adjacent to the MC road. The students were accompanied by a few teaching and non-teaching staff, who rendered their hands in coordination. Soon, this makeshift camp started to fill-in with local residents – including senior citizen, infants and pregnant women. People took shelter here as it is the only high-rise building and the safest place within the range. By dawn the next day, that is, the 16th of August 2018, more than 600 people were stranded inside the building and helicopter supplies ensured their sustenance. All communications were cut-off, which created panic among the parents and guardians.

This public utility building was not an official camp, but a crisis-created makeshift camp, and therefore, lacked in the basic sanitation amenities for a camp. The availability of drinking water became a major issue; a few students took the risk and went to the nearby academic buildings to fetch drinking water. The water was neck-deep, so they had to make a raft with banana trunks and tar vessels tied together to move between the buildings. On the second day, a few locals arrived with a small wooden boat and assisted the students with a few supplies. On the 18th of August 2018, students and others were finally shifted to safer places.

THE STORY OF SURVIVAL

► The university community cleaning the library

All the 24 buildings were flooded in the deluge. This hindered the normal functioning of the varsity and the commencement of classes had to be postponed to the 3rd of September, the actual reopening date being the 29th of August. The functioning of the whole university stalled after the floods created havoc in the entire area. According to the assessment report the institution has suffered damage to the tune of over INR 7,33,63,274 in the inundation. All the generators, control panels in the buildings, the central control panel in the electronics room and water supply systems were fully submerged. It will take at least a fortnight to clean up the administrative block filled with mud and water. Similarly, the engineering wing, Internal Quality Assurance

Cell, Kerala State Audit Department Regional office, Publications, Public Relations, International School for Sree Sankaracharya Studies, Printing Press and related machineries, career guidance cell and general store which function on the ground floor of the administrative building have been rendered dysfunctional. Nearly 60 computers which were to be distributed to various departments were damaged completely. Likewise, writing papers and other stationery items meant for distribution to the regional centres were also damaged. Eight official vehicles belonging to the university were damaged too.

When the water receded, an emergency meeting was convened to act upon how to manage the crisis. The available statutory officers, Syndicate members, teaching and non-teaching staff attended the meeting. Accordingly, the university declared the 20th of August to the 3rd of September as working days to carryout cleaning drives. There were more than 100 staff who had to sacrifice their onam holidays to attend the cleaning drives, around 20 skilled labours were hired and a few voluntary groups from different parts of the state were engaged in the restoration process. The relief works were conducted in two phases, phase one was conducted by the staff, and phase two involved staff as well as volunteers from NCC and NSS units. Considerable relief, recovery and restructuring works have been carried out during these days.

The university had to take good care regarding the amenities before the campus opened for academic functioning. Generators were hired to pump-out mud and water, a new RO (reverse osmosis) plant was installed, water treatment plants were re-commissioned, water from all usable sources were tested at government approved laboratories, the drainage system and manholes.

were cleaned and electrical works have been done on emergency pace. The university had to take precautions against the spread of infectious diseases, thus, the buildings, which includes hostels were cleaned multiple times before they were reopened to the students. Yet, it is stipulated to take more time to restore everything back to the pre-flood state.

The wall painting and the electrical works of the buildings are in progress, even on holidays. The authorities are initiating steps on what can be done to the printing press which was damaged beyond repair. In order to bring back the University to normalcy, financial assistance is an immediate requisite.

THE LOST WISDOM – COLOSSAL DAMAGE TO BOOKS AND RESEARCH WORKS

► Hindi department library

The varsity campus tells the tales of soiled books, lost research materials, and murky department libraries that were inundated in the recent floods. The deluge that ravaged the university headquarters at Kalady has caused extensive destruction to the university library, department libraries, and research scholars' hostels.

Koothambalam ◀

The university has lost books, journals and CDs to the tune of over INR 20,65,000. The central library lost 212 books, interactive CDs, HDDs worth INR 6,55,400. Over 250 books worth INR 6,50,000 were damaged in different department libraries. The Hindi department library is the most affected of all, over 1000 books and 75 journals (including back volumes) quoted at INR 7,50,000 were completely soiled. The International School of Sree Sankaracharya Studies lost 55 books, some of which are out of print at present.

The muddy waters not only damaged properties, but, it also swept away the dreams and hardwork of many research scholars. A few research scholars lost their certificates and other research materials from the inundated hostel rooms. "I don't know what can be done now, i lost all my research related materials. It was my four and half years of hardwork, I am supposed to submit final papers in November", says Rakhi, Research Scholar, Department of Hindi. There are many research scholars like Rakhi who needs to be burn-the-midnight-oil inorder to shred off the soiled dreams.

“PRIORITY IS TO REINSTATE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS”, SAYS MINISTER DR. K T JALEEL

Higher Educational Minister Dr. K T Jaleel took a stock of the damages caused by the deluge at the University. “The educational institutions are the milestone which highlight the state’s development, it is important to restore these institutions to its former state. The government is doing everything in its power to resolve the matter”, says Dr. K T Jaleel. After reviewing the devastation the minister said he will be taking necessary measure to bring back the university to pre-flood state after reviewing the matter with the Chief Minister.

DISTRIBUTES FLOOD RELIEF MATERIALS

► Higher Educational Minister Dr. K T Jaleel distributed the relief kits to the students.

The whole looks upon how Kerala undertook the massive rescue and relief operations. Many world nations take Kerala as the paramount example for unity, and the presence of mind the people showcased on face of a calamity. When the inundated university seeks for help, the varsity's alumni associations were among the first to act upon. The department of Social Work Australian Alumni gathered around 250 relief kits (each kit consists of bed, pillow, bedsheet, pillow cover, bucket and mug) for the students residing in hostels who lost their personal belongings in the deluge.

The Higher Educational Minister Dr. K T Jaleel distributed the relief kits to the students. Vice-Chancellor Dr. Dharmaraj Adat, Angamaly MLA Roji M John, Pro-Vice-Chancellor Prof. K S Ravikumar, Dr. T P Raveendran, Registrar, Syndicate Members V G Gopalakrishnan, Dr. Babu Joseph, Dr. Sajitha were also part of the relief material distribution ceremony.

Free Ayurveda Medical Camp

A Stich in time saves nine – when the flood water subside it is the contagious diseases that worry the inundated areas. Vaidyaratnam P S Varier's Arya Vaidya Sala conducted it's free Ayurveda medical camp (Kalady Chapter) at Sree Sankaracharya University of Sanskrit. Pro-Vice-Chancellor Prof. K S Ravikumar inaugurated the camp 'Santwanasparsham' organised by Arya Vaidya Sala's mobile medical unit in association with the Department of Sanskrit General.

More than 600 people, locals as well as university community, availed free medical consultation, medicines, and counselling mainly in connection with dermatological issues, infections as well as body aches. Dr. T M Unnikrishnan Varier, Deputy Chief Physician, Arya Vaidya Sala presided over the function, Syndicate member Dr. K R Sajitha, Dr. P Unnikrishnan, Director of Students Services, Dr. H Poornima, Head, Department of Sanskrit General, Dr. G Sreevidya, Assistant Professor, Department of Sanskrit General were also part of the event.

WORLD BANK REPRESENTATIVES EVALUATES THE FLOOD DAMAGES

The World Bank representatives visited the varsity to assess the damages caused by the inundation. The World Bank representatives Piyush Sekharia, Disaster Management Expert and Deepa Balakrishnan, Environmental Specialist took a stock of the expanse of destruction caused by the deluge.

DEPARTMENT OF GEOGRAPHY STARTS FLOOD MAPPING PROJECT

The researchers from the department of Geography, Sree Sankaracharya University of Sanskrit started a model mapping project to study the causes and impact of flood in Kerala at local scale. As a pilot study, the researchers started the mapping of Kalady Panchayat – one among the severely inundated area. The project envisages to identify the actual flood plains of river Periyar and its land use conversions using existing maps, satellite images, and ground level survey. This will help to spatially analyse the micro level process of flood and possible solutions. The project will help to develop a “Decentralised Flood Warning System” through the mapping of flood levels across various places at different time. A detailed mapping of valuable areas and population may help to develop an early warning system and mitigation measures. After completion of the pilot project the report will be submitted to the government for a detailed study of the entire Periyar river basin. Furthermore, a Flood Management Plan for the university is also part of the study. Dr. T S Saju, Head, of the Department, faculty members Suresh S, Sarun S, Research Scholars Sajilesh and Asif Musthafa are the team members of this futuristic project.
